The Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company was incorporated January 14, 1916 as a Connecticut corporation. It acquired the stock and took over the business of the Union Metallic Cartridge Company (incorporated June 27, 1873 - Connecticut) and the Remington Arms and Ammunition Company* (incorporated July 8, 1887 - New York) and the latter company's subsidiary M. Hartley Company.

* By order of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, authority was granted to change the name from Remington Arms Company to Remington Arms and Ammunition Company, the new name to be assumed on or after March 16, 1911. The original company, Remington Arms Company, was a New York corporation incorporated July 8, 1887, which purchased at receivership the properties (except typewriter business) of E. Remington & Sons, in receivership since 1886, a New York corporation formed in 1865 as successor by means of successive partnerships to the original business started in 1816.

On May 24, 1920, the Remington Arms Company, Inc. was formed and took over, as of May 1, 1920, the assets and liabilities of The Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company.

GB:AF
The President presented to the meeting a letter to the Company from THE REMINGTON ARMS UNION METALLIC CARTRIDGE COMPANY, a Connecticut corporation, offering to transfer to this Company all the property, assets and business of the said corporation as a going concern, including the good will, (with the exception of $15,000. in cash, to meet expenses in connection with the dissolution of the said corporation), in consideration of the issuance to the said corporation of $10,000,000., par value, of the preferred stock of this Company and 600,000 shares of its common stock without par value, and in consideration of this Company's assuming all the debts and liabilities of the said corporation. The said letter is as follows:

THE REMINGTON ARMS UNION METALLIC CARTRIDGE COMPANY
General Offices
Woolworth Building
233 Broadway
New York City

June 14, 1920.

Remington Arms Company, Inc.
55 Wall Street.
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Pursuant to authorization of the stockholders and the Board of Directors, this Company hereby offers to sell and transfer to you all of its property and assets, both real and personal, tangible and intangible, (with the exception of $15,000.00 in cash, to be reserved by this company to meet expenses of dissolution), and its entire business as a going concern, including its good will, in consideration of the issuance to this Company of $10,000,000.00, par value, of the 7% preferred stock of your Company, (full paid and non-assessable), and 600,000 shares of your common stock without par value, and in consideration of the assumption by you of all the debts and liabilities of this Company; the transfer to be made as of May 1, 1920, and all operations of this Company since that date to be treated as for your account. The said stock to be issued in consideration of the said transfer is to include the ten shares of preferred stock and ten shares of common stock subscribed for by the incorporators.

A statement of this Company, showing its condition at the close of business on April 30, 1920, is submitted herewith. This shows fixed assets amounting to $4,007,844.31, current assets amounting to $22,743,083.46, and liabilities, other than capital stock, amounting to $6,589,566.87. This statement does not include certain claims which have been made against the Company and the validity of which it denies, including a claim for commissions on a contract with the French government made by A. B. Adams, and which is now in suit; and a claim by J. Wesley Allison for commissions on a contract with the British Government on which suit has been commenced against Mr. M. Hartley Dodge for $300,000. and in respect to which this Company has assumed any liability which Mr. Dodge may be under. Liability, if any, in respect to such claims, will, of course, be assumed by your Company.

This Company is the owner of valuable plants at Bridgeport, Connecticut, and Ticon, New York, and also owns factory property in Windsor, Ontario, and, through ownership of the stock of the Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company, Ltd., of England, has a manufacturing plant at Brinsdown, Middlesex, England.

Since the termination of the war, it has actively prosecuted its regular commercial business, consisting largely of the manufacture and sale of sporting arms and ammunition; and the indications are that this business will be even more successful than it was before the war. Owing to the additions to its plants made for war purposes, some of which have been retained, it has facilities for developing other lines of business, such as are expressly covered by the objects and purposes of your Company stated in your certificate of incorporation.
Upon the passage of a Resolution by the Board of Directors of your Company, accepting this offer, and upon the issuance to this Company of the said stock of your Company, an instrument transferring to you all the property and business of this Company, subject to all its debts and liabilities, will be executed and delivered to you; and such further instruments as may be necessary to vest in you fully the title to all real and personal property of this Company will be executed upon request.

Yours very truly,

THE REMINGTON ARMS UNION METALLIC CARTRIDGE Co., INC.

(Sgd) C. L. REIERSON, President.

After discussion and deliberation, the following preambles and resolutions were, on motion duly seconded, unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, in the opinion of the Board of Directors it is desirable, and for the best interests of this Company, that the offer contained in the foregoing letter from The Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company should be accepted upon the terms and conditions stated therein and for the consideration therein mentioned; and

WHEREAS, it is the opinion of the Board of Directors that the property which said The Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company offers to transfer to this Company has a value greatly in excess of $10,000,000.00., the par value of the preferred stock of this Company which is to be issued in part payment therefor:

NOW, THEREFORE,

BE IT RESOLVED, that the said offer be accepted and that the officers of this Company be and they hereby are authorized to notify said The Remington Arms Union
Metallic Cartridge Company of such acceptance and to take all steps necessary for this Company to acquire the assets, property and business, as a going concern, of the said Company, subject to all its debts and liabilities, and, for that purpose, that they forthwith prepare and issue temporary certificates in the name of said The Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company for $10,000,000, par value, of the preferred stock of this Company and for 600,000 shares of the common stock, and deliver the same to the said Company in exchange for an instrument executed by the said Company transferring to this Company all property, assets and business of the said Company, as of May 1, 1920, including its good will, subject to all its debts and liabilities, and that they arrange to obtain from the said Company, as soon as practicable, deeds covering the real estate owned by it, proper assignments of its patents, and such other instruments as may be necessary to fully vest in this Company all the property of The Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company.
W. H. Reisinger,
Remington Arms Co.,
Bristolport, Conn.

Referring to the above company, I have been examining the minute book for the purpose of determining whether or not there was any legal impediment to a prompt dissolution of the company.

The minute book does not contain a copy of the charter and as a matter of record, there is nothing to show under which law the company was incorporated, or the date of incorporation. I understand, however, that it was incorporated under New York law and has been in existence since May 12, 1888.

It also appears from the minute book that at a meeting dated January 28, 1916, the officers of the company were authorized to transfer all of the assets of the company to the Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company, a Connecticut corporation, on the condition that the last mentioned corporation would assume all of the liabilities of Remington Arms & Ammunition Company.

There is a notation in the minutes of June 14, 1916, to the effect that a bill of sale and conveyance was executed on January 31, 1916, the minute making no reference to the subject matter of the bill of sale or conveyance, but I am assuming that the minute refers to the transfer of the property to Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company.

I am assuming that these assets were later transferred by Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company to Remington Arms Company, Inc., but have no evidence of the fact, and I wish that you would look up these various conveyances and advise me what ultimately became of the property owned by Remington Arms & Ammunition Company.

Remington Arms Company - A Brief History

1816 - The history of Remington Arms Company starts in 1816 when Eliphalet Remington II built his first flint-lock rifle at the family forge near Ilion, New York. The Company was simply known as Remington's until 1856.

1856 - "Lite" Remington had three sons - Philo, Samuel and Eliphalet III. All three joined him in the business and eventually became partners in the firm. The Company name was changed to E. Remington & Sons in 1856.

1861 - Eliphalet Remington II died on August 12th, and ownership passed to his three sons. No change in Company name.

1865 - E. Remington & Sons was incorporated with no change in Company name.

1888 - The years following the Civil War were difficult for Remington, as for many other companies. Expanded facilities were now larger than needed plus it was difficult to find new products and markets to replace cancelled Government contracts. Financial problems continued into the 1880s finally forcing Remington into receivership in 1886. The Company was purchased jointly by Marcellus Hartley and the Winchester Arms Company in 1888. The new company operated as the Remington Arms Company with Marcellus Hartley as President and Thomas Bennett, son-in-law of O.F. Winchester, as Vice President.

Marcellus Hartley was also owner of the Union Metallic Cartridge Company which he had formed, along with Malcomb Green and Jacob Schuyler, as the Union Metallic Cartridge & Cap Co. in 1865. This new Company was started in Bridgeport, Connecticut with the purchase of all or part of the machinery and equipment of Crittenden & Tibbals Mfg. Co., South Coventry, Connecticut, and C.D. Leet, Springfield, Massachusetts. Company name was changed to Union Metallic Cartridge Company in 1867 and Marcellus Hartley acquired full ownership of UMC shortly thereafter.

1896 - Marcellus Hartley purchases the Winchester share of Remington and acquires complete ownership.

1902 - Marcellus Harley dies and ownership of both Remington Arms Company and the Union Metallic Cartridge Company pass to his Grandson, Marcellus Hartley Dodge.

1911 - Remington Arms Company and the Union Metallic Cartridge Company were officially joined as one company in 1911. The new name was REMINGTON ARMS-UNION METALLIC CARTRIDGE COMPANY.
1912 - Remington establishes a shotshell loading plant at Brimsdown, England. The actual starting date for this "English Loading Factory" is not known. A 1926 article indicates that the plant started in 1912. However, the deed to the property was dated in 1913.

1916 - Company name changed to THE REMINGTON ARMS UNION METALLIC CARTRIDGE COMPANY. Adding THE and dropping the hyphen was a rather minor change that has now become significant to the historian and collector in dating ammunition boxes and other products.

1920 - Company name changed to Remington Arms Company, Inc.

1933 - E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Company, Inc. acquired a controlling interest in Remington Arms Company in May.

1933 - Chamberlin Cartridge & Target Company was taken over by Remington.

1934 - Remington created a new subsidiary, the Peters Cartridge Company of Delaware. On May 15, 1934, this subsidiary acquired the assets and business of the Peters Cartridge Company of Ohio.

1934 - Remington acquired the Charles Parker Company, makers of the famous Parker shotgun.

1946 - The vacant English Loading Factory at Brimsdown, England was sold at auction.

1980 - DuPont acquires complete ownership of Remington.

1993 - An announcement was made on October 21st that a New York based investment group, Clayton-Dubilier-Rice, had signed a purchase agreement for the plant, equipment and inventory of the Remington Arms Company from the previous owner, E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Company, Inc.

According to Hackley, Woodin and Scranton, in their book, History of Modern U.S. Military Small Arms Ammunition, Volume I: 1880-1939, "This was the old Robin Hood plant taken over by Remington primarily to make 8mm French Lebel ball cartridges under World War I contracts. In June, 1918, this plant was also asked to start production of Cal. .30 Model 1906 ball ammunition."

The Swanton plant was set up by Remington to manufacture four million French Lebel cartridges weekly.

"Prior to the development of our own machine guns, the purchase of 8-mm Hotchkiss machine guns and Chauchat automatic rifles and rifles from the French necessitated the procurement of ammunition for these. The best we could expect from the French was approximately 6,500,000 rounds per month, and it was obviously necessary to place orders in the United States. Two concerns - the Remington Arms plant at Swanton and the Western Cartridge Co. - had been making this type for the French Government in the past. Accordingly, the first order was placed with Remington on July 24, 1917, and on August 4 orders were placed with both companies.

Capt. Harold P. Sheldon in his book, Vermont in the World War 1917-1919, states: "In contrast to this condition might be instanced the industrial expansion experienced by the town of Swanton, in which was located the Robin Hood Ammunition Company, which in 1915 had received a contract for small arms ammunition from the French Commission, which conducted the purchasing for the French government in America. In 1915 this plant was taken over by the Remington Arms Company, Inc., and underwent a process of reorganization and re-equipment. About the time the French contract for 150 million cartridges had been completed the United States had entered the war, and due to the fact that the American government was unable to send into France rifles and machine guns" to take the thirty Springfield ammunition such as used by the American government, and as France had an abundance of rifles and machine guns suited to the Lebel ammunition, the Swanton concern received an order from the United States government for fifty million of these cartridges, and on the completion of this contract an additional order for 200 million was allotted with the request for the largest deliveries possible, which made it necessary for the company to operate night and day, bringing labor on a special train from St. Albans as the local labor supply had been completely exhausted. The pay roll of the company showed that between eight and nine hundred hands were employed at the peak when it was making deliveries of about four million cartridges a week, a production which gained for the plant the reputation of turning out more cartridges per floor area than any other concern in the nation. The boom condition in Swanton, typical of some other places, was shown by the fact that it became impossible to find boarding places for all the employees and that private homes had to open up their facilities in order to afford sufficient sleeping quarters. The company found itself forced to ask the government for an appropriation to build a cafeteria in order that the employees might find food, a request which the government found necessary to grant.

"Swanton also demonstrated the keenness of competition for labor, even between plants engaged on essential government war work. The company found it necessary to supply services equalled to those afforded employees in the larger industrial communities and indulged in a general line of welfare work in order to keep the help contented, which was a difficult problem due to representatives from other localities coming and offering high wages and additional inducements. For a time the concern suffered from this competition, but many of those who left soon returned as they found living conditions more economical in Swanton than in the larger places outside the State.

"The end of the war brought the collapse of those conditions in Swanton, typical also of what was experienced in a greater or less degree in other places. Due to the company's extensive holdings at Bridgeport, Conn., the Swanton plant was closed down and thrown on the market for a purchaser. There were insufficient industries of any nature in the town to absorb the hundreds of employees who were thrown into idleness by suspension of operations at the plant and there followed a constant exodus of skilled mechanics from the village and the boom period was at a close."

The factory employed the headstamp "RA S and date." RA for Remington Arms, S for Swanton and a two digit number indicating the year of production (18 = 1918).

In 1914 hostilities started in Europe and orders started to roll into the Remington Arms Company. The Bridgeport, Connecticut facility had increased its floor space from sixteen acres in 1914 to forty acres in 1915. When the Russians ordered 100,000,000 7.62-millimeter Russian cartridges, there was insufficient capacity at the Bridgeport plant to fulfill the contract.

Harry Pinney, who had previously worked for Remington and who had left in 1910, was asked to return. He determined a new plant was required. To avoid construction delays, he looked around for a suitable factory and found it in a plant being built by the Hoboken Land and Improvement Company. He rented it and within ten months conversion of the plant was completed and they were turning out components for 2,500,000 cartridges a day. These components were shipped to Bridgeport for loading.

By February, 1917, Hoboken and Bridgeport were turning out four million cartridges per day. When the United States entered the war a few months latter, the Hoboken and Bridgeport cartridge production was switched over to .30-06 cartridges to meet the needs of the United States Government. After the armistice was signed the Hoboken plant was closed down and returned to its owners. The factory employed the headstamp "RA H and date." RA for Remington Arms, H for Hoboken and a two digit number indicating the year of production (18 = 1918).

According to Hackley, Woodin and Scranton, in their book, History of Modern U.S. Military Small Arms Ammunition, Volume I: 1880-1939, "During at least part of the Cal. .30 Pederson Device cartridge contract, the cases were made at the Hoboken plant and shipped to the Bridgeport plant for loading."
